SPECIAL SUMMER VALUES!

We promised you a summer full of spectacular numismatic activity, and we're working harder every day to keep up with the frantic pace we've been setting. Your response to our recent mini-mailer was lively and gratifying -- we're glad to see that so many of you are taking advantage of this unusual summer coin market!

Since our last monthly mailer, New England buyers have been attending major shows in Lake Tahoe, Milwaukee, and Washington. As you can see, our inventory has grown to enormous proportions over this past month, and we expect it to grow even larger as we prepare for the 1978 A.N.A. Convention next month in Houston. Meanwhile, we hope you'll agree that this listing surpasses even New England's usually excellent selection of choice material. And we know you'll find our prices irresistible!

As you look over this listing, be sure not to miss our special summer values! These fabulous discounts on select items will be offered to the public in the August 2 issue of COIN WORLD -- but we always try to give our mailing list customers first chance at such special offerings.

If you don't find exactly the coins you need for your collection or investment portfolio, please don't hesitate to give us a call to discuss your want list. Our numismatic resources are more extensive than any other in the industry, and our professional sales staff knows just where to look for any item you require.

Let us be part of your exciting Summer of '78!

The Time is Now!

My discussions with potential investors in the rare coin market seem to focus predominantly on one key question, "When is the right time to buy rare coins?" There is, of course, no simple answer to this question. However, an analysis of what has made rare coins such a viable, lucrative investment in the past, plus an overview of the status of rare coins in today's financial marketplace, should help us to clarify the question.

The rare coin market is an exemplary illustration of the economic laws of supply and demand. Therefore, to understand why rare coins have appreciated so dramatically, and what the outlook for their future might be, we must study the interplay of those two factors -- supply and demand -- as they apply to investment quality coins.

Supply

The U.S. Mint has been issuing coinage since the late 1700's and, of course, will not re-mint any coins of previous years. Up to the mid-1930's, the mintage figures were sufficiently low that most of these coins are presently considered scarce. However, after this time, the mintage figures started to climb to such large quantities that coins minted after the 1930's, with few exceptions, will not be considered scarce in the next twenty years (the only time period I feel we should be concerned with in this analysis). Since no more pre-1930's coins can be minted, our supply will not grow. In fact, due to damage through fire, mishandling and loss, the supply is actually declining slightly.

More important to this analysis, however, is the supply of investment grade pre-1930's rare coins. As has been evident in the last ten years, coin collectors, and especially coin investors, have become consistently more quality-conscious. They are looking primarily at Uncirculated and Proof condition coins (with the exception of those issues of the earliest years or of the scarcest coins, where the purchase of Uncirculated or Proof coins would be unrealistic or unfeasible.) The supply of these coins, which was minimal to begin with, has become even smaller in number, and smaller still in what is available on the open market. For example, some coins in certain conditions exist, but haven't traded publicly in years. The total supply is diminished by the same causes that affect the whole group of coins (loss, damage, etc.). The market supply (that is, coins that will pass through the open market) is further reduced because:

- 1) High grade coins are often purchased by affluent collectors who either donate the coins to museums or pass them down within their families.
- 2) European and, of late, Japanese and Middle Eastern businessmen are presently buying these high grade coins and bringing them back to their countries -- out of our normal coin marketplace.
- 3) As our average life-span increases, the number of years a coin collection remains intact has increased, thus decreasing the number of rarities entering the U.S. marketplace each year.
- 4) If in possession of coins in lower grades, the collector will often trade up, thereby keeping the coins circulating through the market; however, once a collector has found his "gem" piece it is usually put in his collection and therefore removed from the market.

These factors lead to the conclusion that the actual market supply of "investment quality coins" is quite small (that is, the number of coins traded is small in comparison to the number outstanding.) It will become even smaller over the next decade as collectors live longer and as more collections are put into permanent displays in museums.

Demand

The overall demand for rare coins has increased tremendously over the past twenty years. In 1954, there were an estimated 1/2 to 1 million collectors. In 1964, when the government announced that the Mint would not produce any more 100% silver coins, many people became hoarders, and then serious collectors. By 1977, coin collecting had become one of the largest and fastest growing hobbies in the country, with an estimated ten to fourteen million collectors. It will probably continue to grow at a fast pace as more people become interested in coins as an investment and a hedge against inflation. Additionally, with more leisure time available, people will undoubtedly spend more time involved in hobbies. Even further, more U.S. rare coins than ever are being collected in Europe; and lately, there has been a strong demand for these coins in Japan and the Middle East.

This increased participation in rare coin collecting has resulted in the price increases of the recent past. When demand first began to increase, it caused only mild price increases (by coin market standards) of 15% to 20% per year. But, as the demand increased substantially and the supply of coins in the market became smaller, the price increases became more pronounced (i.e., 1972-1977 increases of 32% on Uncirculated coins -- see attached chart.) As demand continues to grow, a certain point is reached where each subsequent increase in demand causes continually larger increases in price. This demand point was reached for some series during the mid-1970's. And now that it has been reached, each added increment to demand in the future will cause very large price increases in these series.

Supply/Demand Interplay

As the coin hobby continues to grow, the phenomenon of increased demand will inevitably become more and more prevalent. In addition, the increase in demand will be spread among a wider range of coin series, since some series will become too expensive for the majority of collectors. Therefore, there is a decreasing likelihood of any particular series stagnating in price for any length of time. In the future, market pressure will force all series up almost continually due to the increased demand and constant supply. Presently, the demand is not great enough to force all series up at once, so you find one series moving up, and then another. A coin hits a resistance level and the price therefore remains constant for a time. (The resistance level is the price level over which collectors or investors find the price prohibitive.) At this point, demand slackens. However, when the number of collectors and investors reaches about twenty million, all series will have sufficient interest (i.e., demand) to allow resistance levels to be quickly surpassed. This means that prices will go up even faster.

Demand for Investment Quality Coins

The increased number of collectors also affects the demand for "investment quality" rare coins. As more collectors become quality-conscious, it is likely that they would prefer to buy one Uncirculated coin rather than many circulated pieces. Adding even further to demand is the entrance into the coin market of pure investors. These are people who are buying coins for investment purposes only, and not to satisfy any collector interest. These investors comprise one of the fastest growing areas of the coin collecting population.

Since the stock market has been floundering both in the averages and in buyer confidence, investors are turning to other avenues. New areas of interest include tangibles or "collectibles." Since rare coins have the strongest track record among these alternatives, investors have begun to put a portion of their funds into rare coin portfolios.

At New England, we have had numerous financial advisors approach us over the past year to make up portfolios for their customers. Five years ago, our advice never would have been sought. I personally deal with the financial community in Boston, which is by any standards considered conservative, and I find that there is more and more of a serious interest in rare coins as an investment vehicle. With the recent publicity rare coins and other collectibles have been receiving, I feel that pure investors will soon represent a greater portion of the coin collectors than ever. This added buying power pursuing investment quality coins will drive prices even higher, bringing more and more investors into the coin market.

The Time is Now

To sum up the demand side of the supply/demand equation: demand is increasing dramatically due to collector increases (life span of the collector, leisure time interest in coin collecting, and finally, a dramatic increase in the number of "pure investors" in the market.) Now that we have examined both the supply and demand sides of the issue, let us return to our original question, "When is the right time to buy rare coins?"

I feel that although prices might seem inflated at the present time, there is little danger that they will decline in the future. Their stability is due to the fact, previously discussed, that the demand for investment quality coins is increasing as collectors are becoming more quality-conscious. The entry of investors into the marketplace is fortifying this burgeoning demand. Since these new investors are unfamiliar with recent price levels, they are less likely to backoff a particular series because they think it is overpriced in relation to other series. This is also true of the novice collector who starts with quality material since he has no point of reference. With the strong market of recent months and the unavailability of quantities of quality material, even the collector is hesitant to wait for the perfect piece. Prices should therefore continue to rise across the board even more rapidly than in the past.

In the "sell" side of the market, fewer coins will be available as most of today's investors are being informed that coin investing is a long term proposition. This in turn will decrease downward sell pressure since more material will be out of the market for longer periods of time. In short, increased demand means that prices probably will not go down in the near term. The future promises even greater percentage increases.

I can only say that rare coins are the most attractive investment vehicle presently available, whether compared with another collectible, or the stock market, or any other investment avenue. Rare coin prices are low in comparison to what they will probably be in the next five years.

Let me conclude with some advice. Buy as much now as you can comfortably afford. Even buy duplicates if you are a serious collector -- one for your collection and one for pure investment. Whatever you do, don't pass up high quality coins; in the next five years their prices will be much higher, and often you might not see that coin traded in the market again. "The time to buy is now!"

The Answers To Two Important Questions.

Question 1. Why invest in rare coins?

Very simply, because a demonstrated growth rate of 59% per year for the last five years on a representative portfolio of uncirculated coins is pretty hard to beat in any of the traditional investment media. And, this 59% per year appreciation rate is just for the highest mintage "type" coins, as listed in The Guidebook of United States Coins, and doesn't include statistics for the better quality, rarer coins.

Current uncertain economic conditions are driving many investors to seek more secure, lucrative alternatives to the stock market and commodities exchanges, and many professional financial advisors are finding that rare coins are an extremely attractive alternative. Rare coins are "the number one hedge against inflation," according to Franz Pick (BARRON'S). D. Reginald Tibbetts of AMERICAN COLLECTOR believes that "coins, especially rare coins, generally outperform other types of investments and a collector has the tangible joys of gathering and admiring a coin collection. Coins do well in recessions and inflationary periods." Max Liebler of Shearson Hayden Stone, writing in COMMODITIES magazine noted that, "in many instances, investing in good rare coins has been found to have a greater profit return potential than investing in gold bars or modern issue gold coins."

Largely in response to the pervasive disillusionment with the future of stocks and bonds, the coin market is presently experiencing one of the most incredible booms in its history. As more and more investors enter the market, the market gets stronger and stronger — and this trend is, we feel, likely to continue for quite some time.

With the decline of the dollar on the international market, and erratic economic conditions at home, think about the precarious behavior of your stock market investments. And consider how the 6% yearly inflation rate is affecting your savings account. It's no wonder that a 59% per year appreciation rate has made rare coins one of the most popular alternative investment media.

U.S. MINT COIN DIES

New England Rare Coin Galleries is proud to offer to our customers this once-in-a-lifetime numismatic opportunity. For the first time ever, you have the chance to own an invaluable treasure — the actual dies used in the minting of United States coinage, mounted in a specially designed unit. New England Rare Coin Galleries is the only firm from whom you can purchase these dies, as we bought all that the U.S. Government released to public ownership. Once our supply is exhausted, there will be no more dies on the market (the government now has stringent controls to preclude the release of any more dies from the mint). They are, however, completely legal to own as they were defaced at the mint.

These dies were used in the striking of the 1968 Proof sets, the first set ever not issued from the Philadelphia Mint, and the first to bear the mint-mark of the newly reactivated San Francisco branch.

We are offering these dies set in a specially designed unit which holds the removable coin die, a descriptive plaque (detailing the history of the die), and a 1968 Proof coin of the denomination produced by that particular die. All these elements are set into a stand of American Maple wood with a walnut finish. Each of these units is totally unique, as each plaque bears the engraved serial number of the coin die in the unit.

New England Rare Coin Galleries is offering this remarkable collector's item at a price that is incredibly low when one considers that there is only a small, finite supply available. Never again will you have this opportunity.

The dies are available either mounted as a complete unit (including descriptive plaque and Proof coin) for $39.95, or by themselves for $29.95. Denomination is our choice, but we will try to accommodate your preferences. Offer limited to no more than three (3) dies per customer. Please include $1.95 for handling and shipping; allow 6-8 weeks for delivery.

ALTERNATE CHOICES

Since many of our listed items are understandably one of a kind, we ask that you list alternate selections so that we may have a better chance of completing your order. Of course, we will not send out any alternate selections unless your first choices have already been sold. If you are ordering for a type set, please list "type coin" as your alternate choice so if your first choice is not available, we can fill your order with another coin of the same type in equal or higher grade.

TERMS OF SALE

Please enclose full remittance with your order unless you have previously established credit with us. Massachusetts residents only please add 5% sales tax or else furnish us with your tax-exempt resale number. An immediate refund will be sent on all items which have already been sold.

RETURN PRIVILEGE We offer a full 30 day return privilege on all coins. This means that any coin may be returned within 30 days from receipt for an immediate refund for any reason or for no reason at all! All items are subject to prior sale and all prices are subject to change without notice. This listing cancels all previous prices for any item listed here. A copy of our famous grading and authenticity guarantee is free upon request. We feel it is the most comprehensive guarantee available in the industry.

APPROVAL SERVICE Coins can be sent to you on approval if you have previously established credit with us. Please send us banking references and at least two numismatic references if possible.

MASTER CHARGE and BAC/VISA are welcome, however, we request that you send written order, which must contain your signature as it appears on your card along with all the raised information. You may call to reserve items to be paid for by credit cards but the coins will be held pending receipt of your written order.

GRADING GUARANTEE

We guarantee that coins purchased from us are graded correctly and will meet our high standards when you wish to sell them. Further, we guarantee to purchase these coins at the same grade as they were sold, and, if you request auction for disposal of your collection, that New England Rare Coin Auctions will catalog your coins at the same grade which you purchased them.

We further guarantee the authenticity of all coins listed. As proof of our certainty that no counterfeit or altered coin can escape our attention, we will guarantee to refund full purchase price plus 10% interest per year on any non-authentic coin sold by New England Rare Coin Galleries.

OFFICE HOURS

We are open Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

You may examine coins in person at our office which is conveniently located in downtown Boston, at 89 Devonshire Street. Since all coins are kept in bank vaults, please call at least 30 minutes in advance so that we may have the coins available for your viewing.
